RE: Notice No. 4, TTB Proposed Rulemaking, Flavored Malt Beverages
and Related Proposals

Dear Mr. Foster:

I write as Mary Joy Madrigano of Beer Capitol Distributing, Inc. to oppose Alcohol and Tobacco Tax and Trade Bureau ("TTB") Notice No. 4, which would severely limit the use of flavors containing alcohol in flavored malt beverages, also referred to as FMBs. Instead, my company supports the more reasonable majority standard that would allow such flavoring materials to contribute up to 49% of the alcohol content of an FMB.

I operate a distributorship in Waukesha, WI and FMB sales currently constitute about 10 percent of my overall volume and 13.5 percent of my total revenue. My investment in the sales and promotion of these products has been substantial and based upon a long term commitment to these products.

The regulatory changes proposed in Notice No. 4, however, threaten my FMB business. Virtually all FMBs today derive a majority of their alcohol content from flavors. Notice No. 4 proposes to drastically change long-standing federal policies that have permitted the use of a wide range of flavoring materials in FMBs by limiting the alcohol contribution from these ingredients to less than 0.5% alcohol by volume. Should this unprecedented change in regulatory policy go into effect, my FMB suppliers will be forced to make changes that will inevitably harm my business.

To Change the FMB formulas at this point and face the possibility of them being classified as distilled spirits would be devastating to myself and my 100 employees and families as I am not a distilled spirits wholesaler.

Distributors of fine imported beers, specialty microbeers, soda, and juice.

Second, even if some FMB suppliers can change their formulas to comply with the proposed 0.5% standard, it is unclear whether brewers of many popular products can reformulate and achieve taste profiles similar to those enjoyed by consumers today. Reformulation will also require investment in expensive technologies and treatment procedures, and no one yet knows what effect these changes will have on the price of FMBs. In addition, it is uncertain what impact the proposed standards will have on the ability of manufacturers to create new FMB products in the future. Without question, FMB manufacturers have been able to produce popular and profitable beverage products under TTB's current FMB policies. Should the proposed 0.5% standard result in product changes that cause consumers to reject FMBs, at best, my sales volume for FMBs would decline sharply and at worst, I could lose my ability to sell FMBs at all.

While Notice No. 4 claims that the proposed 0.5% standard is necessary to prevent consumer confusion, TTB's proposed rulemaking does not present any evidence that demonstrates the need for a radical change in the formula policies for FMBs. In addition, Notice No. 4 states that federal law would support a more reasonable standard that would allow less than 50% of the alcohol content of an FMB to be derived from flavoring materials and other ingredients containing alcohol. This "majority" standard is a responsible and rational compromise, as it will achieve the goals of national uniformity and market stability, while preserving the market for all current brands.

As TTB's final rules will determine the future of all FMBs and those businesses that rely on the viability of this beverage category, I strongly urge TTB to adopt a majority standard rather than its current proposal.

Sincerely,

Mary Joy Madrigano
President
